Investment Objective

Generate high current earnings as dividends and interest income, while maintaining a highly-diversified portfolio that includes investment-grade bonds and equities from large North American companies with growing dividends.

Investment Process

The fund's assets are invested in a well-diversified portfolio of equities listed on a recognized Canadian and American stock market. The portfolio focuses on dividends and common stocks from the largest North American companies. Fundamental analysis of securities is encouraged and focuses on the likelihood of dividend increase and stock price stability. This management approach also avoids market timing, resulting in very low portfolio turnover rates. Portfolios are well-diversified by sectors and industries. Liquidities and bonds are used to preserve capital when market conditions are unfavourable and may be held to manage cash position, as well as for strategic purposes.

The portfolio's core consists of high-quality securities. Securities from small- and mid-cap companies with increased long-term dividends complement this core.

Visual support of quarterly comments

The Canadian stock market ended the quarter with a 4.5% loss, while all sectors except real estate (0.5%) and information technology (10.2%) did not deliver positive returns. The health sector (-13.5%), which lost its momentum at the end of the year, was the hardest hit. As was the case last year, it was the energy sector (-9.4%) which had the biggest negative impact on our Canadian index. Although the price of oil (WTI) rose more than 7% in 2018, Canadian oil (WCS) is slow to materialize this price growth. This puts significant pressure on Canadian companies in this sector, which have lost nearly 20% in the last 15 months.

On the American side, unlike its Canadian counterpart, the S&P 500 index started the year in force as it gained more than 7% in the first three weeks of the year, due in particular to the announcement of the tax reform of the American president. Volatility then gained the upper hand, as each sharp decline was followed by a strong rebound, and ultimately ended the quarter on a negative note as a tariff war with China emerged and several technology stocks stumbled. The U.S. index ended the first quarter down 0.25%, but Canadian investors were able to benefit from the weakness of our currency to boost this yield to 2.75%. Only the information technology (3.5%) and consumer discretionary (3.1%) sectors delivered positive returns.

As we expect continued volatility in the coming months, our North American investments will remain focused on stocks with attractive valuation ratios and interesting dividend to limit the risks associated with daily stock market upswings, while generating a current income.

Performance is calculated on net basis of management, operational, transaction and administrative fees. Data from "Active Return Attribution Summary" and main positive and negative fund contributions come from the Bloomberg system. The performance calculated by the Bloomberg system is an estimation and may vary from actual performance due to the information update method, the return calculation method and costs associated with the fund. The top 5 and bottom 5 performers lists (Total return YTD) explain the performance of the securities since the beginning of the year or since the addition of the security if it was made later than January 1st.
